Arendt, Hannah (1906–1975)

1/4: Who is this

Born October 14, 1906 (Cf. The European Graduate School. URL (06.11.12) <http://bit.ly/YDk4Ye>) Die deutsche Jüdin Hannah Arendt floh 1933 aus NS-Deutschland nach Frankreich und später in die USA. Angesichts des Eichmann-Prozesses in Jerusalem formulierte sie Anfang der sechziger Jahre ihr berühmtes Diktum von der "Banalität des Bösen". 2006 wäre Arendt 100 Jahre alt geworden. Das Werk der politischen Philosophin erlebte mit den Freiheitsrevolutionen in Mittel- und Osteuropa eine Renaissance. Nach dem Untergang des sowjetischen Imperiums stehen die europäischen Zivilgesellschaften vor der Aufgabe, nach Jahrzehnten der gewaltsamen Teilung eine gemeinsame Identität, eine neue politische Kultur der Freiheit und der Demokratie zu entwickeln. Arendts Erfahrungen mit dem Stalinismus und dem Nationalsozialismus können dazu beitragen. She described herself instead as a political theorist because her work centers on the fact that "men, not Man, live on the earth and inhabit the world." [2] Arendt's work deals with the nature of power, and the subjects of politics, authority, and totalitarianism. Arendt's essay "On Violence" distinguishes violence and power. She maintains that, although theorists of both the Left and Right regard violence as an extreme manifestation of power, the two concepts are in fact antithetical. Power comes from the collective will and does not need violence to achieve any of its goals since voluntary compliance takes its place. As governments start losing their legitimacy, violence becomes an artificial means towards the same ends and is therefore found only in the absence of Power. Bureaucracies then become the ideal birthplaces of violence since they are defined as the "rule by no one," with whom to argue against and therefore re-create the missing link with the people it rules over.

"Arendt was an avid reader from a young age, and by her sixteenth year her literary interests included Kant, and Goethe. In 1924 she graduated from high school in Königsberg. Perhaps inspired by the theology and romantic thought of Kierkegaard's poetry that was also in her library, she decided to study theology at the University of Marburg with Rudolf Bultmann. Martin Heidegger was lecturing at Marburg on Existenzphilosophie, and writing what would eventually become Sein und Zeit [Being and time] in 1927. It was during her time at Marburg that Arendt began her long relationship with Heidegger, sparked by a brief and passionate affair. The affair ended when Arendt learned of Heidegger's involvement in the National Socialist party, but the friendship, however strained, would continue for years to come, and Heidegger's phenomenological method had a notable influence on Arendt's work.

Arendt went on to study the phenomenological method with Husserl, then became a student at the University of Heidelberg, studying with the existentialist Karl Jaspers. It is under Jaspers that she wrote her dissertation on St. Augustine's concept of Love (Der Liebesbegriff bei Augustin). Jaspers and Arendt maintained a close relationship throughout their lives.

Arendt's unique approach to political thought is derived from her education in and fidelity to the phenomenological method. Unlike typical political writing or philosophy which might begin with an analysis of general political concepts or empirical data associated with political science and impose conceptual structures on experience after the fact, she begins by prioritizing human life in its 'factual' and experiential character. By using the phenomenological method, returning to 'the things themselves', she attempts to reveal the fundamental structures of political experience, or political being-in-the-world, in its distinct existence apart from other ways of being.

In September 1929 Arendt earned her doctorate, and married Günther Stern (whose nom-de-plume was Günter Anders). Anti-Semitism was on the rise in Germany, and Arendt undertook a project that would help her understand the conflict between German Nationalism and minority status. The book Rahel Varnhagen: The Life of a Jewish Woman was a biography of a Jewish salon hostess in Berlin in the early 1800s who converted to Christianity. It remained unpublished until 1958."

2/4: What is he or she accused of?

"Among the first to analyze the far-reaching implications of the new situation in Europe was the Frankfurt school, known for its Critical Theory. On the eve of Hitler's downfall, two of its members, Adorno and Horkheimer, made the first breakthrough, doing away with the old Marxist clichés, that had long served them as an explanation for both Nazism and antisemitism.⁴ Jew-hatred was no longer a mere class struggle in disguise. The Third Reich ceased to be one more manifestation of the death pangs of Capitalism. The two authors doubted the happy-end that awaits us all at the fulfillment of the historical process. They cast a shadow on the hallowed tradition of the Enlightenment. There and in later writings Horkheimer and Adorno established a link between Auschwitz and modernity, and gave rise to a new evaluation of both. In their footsteps followed Hannah Arendt, who placed antisemitism in the context of totalitarian society.

She saw antisemitism as being intertwined with imperialism and totalitarianism, all three phenomena reflecting the downfall of traditional bourgeois values⁵. Hannah Arendt wrote in the midst of the Cold War and enlarged her scope to transcend Auschwitz, referring to a larger variety of oppressive regimes. Her outlook was universal and not at all confined to a particular Jewish viewpoint. Arendt undertook to lay bare the origins of totalitarianism, and inadvertently enhanced the importance of the Jewish Question. She went back to nineteenth century antisemitism, and presented the entry of the Jews into European society as a test case of sorts." <http://bit.ly/VsQAMI> confronts the reader with yet another problematic conclusion: that the Jews, through their financial and banking activities, played a crucial role in the rise of the absolute monarchies and the modern nation-state. Critical readers cannot help but ask themselves what exactly is going on here, and where these views are coming from. The answer is clear: Arendt, who explicitly acknowledges that she is not a historian, is talking about the role played by the "court Jews," mainly in the 18th century, in the courts of some German princes. At the same time, she is basing her argument on Jewish bankers' involvement in the development of the banking system in the 19th century. No one disputes this. The problem is that Arendt generalizes from these historical findings to draw conclusions about the place of "the Jews" in European history, while entirely ignoring the fact that most of the Jews -- even in the German states -- were neither court Jews nor financial advisors to princes, but rather small traders and shopkeepers.

“A more comprehensive examination of Arendt's theory concerning the rise of anti-Semitism in the parts of Europe she does discuss (mostly Germany and to a certain extent France)

'No poor Jews'

As Arendt would have it, there were no poor Jews living on the margins of European society, managing to live with difficulty and without political and civil rights. As Arendt would have it, 'the Jews' were all bankers, financiers, court Jews and privileged, or in her generalizing language: "The Jews had been purveyors in wars and the servants of kings." Not some individual Jews, but 'the Jews.' [...] According to Arendt, "the Jews" always supported the governments in power in whichever country they were living, but the truth is that the number of Jews in the revolutionary, liberal and socialist movements was far greater than their representation in the overall population. "The Jews," continues Arendt, were responsible for the hatred felt toward them because of their communal seclusion, their non-involvement in politics, their concern solely for themselves and their non-participation in social and class struggles.

[...] Nevertheless, it would be wrong, even wicked, to see Arendt as a person tainted by Jewish self-hatred. She was a proud Jew and a courageous fighter against anti-Semitism and totalitarianism, which is why she wrote this book. Yet as she herself would acknowledge, sometimes victims internalize the criticism aimed at them by their enemies. And indeed, though her book contains echoes of anti-Semitic stereotypes and accusations, Hannah Arendt is by no means a self-hating Jew. On the contrary, she comes across as a victim of anti-Semitism, in what is perhaps one of its cruelest, and most insidious, forms. There are tragic aspects to this monumental treatise, demonstrating just what anti-Semitism can sometimes do to the most brilliant of Jewish minds. This tragedy is painful and distressing -- and far from banal." URL (17.10.12): <http://bit.ly/RvebtS>

"From these and from the German academic environment in which her outlook was formed Arendt drew her contemptuous attitude towards Jews, an attitude that was basic to her interpretation of modern history and that infected her relationship to everything Jewish, including Zionism and Israel." URL (17.10.12): <http://bit.ly/U98a8a>

"My essay, published in the Times Literary Supplement in October 2009, was concerned specifically with puncturing Arendt's claim to be taken seriously as a historian. [...] In a long, carefully documented essay, Wasserstein (who's now at the University of Chicago), cites Arendt's scandalous use of quotes from anti-Semitic and Nazi ‘authorities’ on Jews in her Totalitarianism book.

“Wasserstein concludes that her use of these sources was ‘more than a methodological error: it was symptomatic of a perverse world-view contaminated by over-exposure to the discourse of collective contempt and stigmatization that formed the object of her study’—that object being anti-Semitism. In other words, he contends, Arendt internalized the values of the anti-Semitic literature she read in her study of anti-Semitism, at least to a certain extent. Wasserstein's conjecture will reignite the debate over Arendt's contemptuous remarks on certain Jews who were victims of Hitler in her Eichmann book and in her letters.” URL (17.10.12): <http://slate.me/Ws8nEg>

Prof. Shmuel Almog. Prof. at the Institute of Contemporary Jewry of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem since 1996- Professor Emeritus. He had the following to say about his interests: “Following a previous study I conducted on the subject of productivization in modern Jewish history (published in Hebrew in 1987 and in 1992 as well), I am now trying to reexamine the issue of the Jews as middlemen, both in the historical and economic literature of the 19th century and again in recent sociological writings, inspired by the use of ethnicity in the second half of the 20th century. I would like to establish a link between previous notions about the function Jews may have fulfilled in the socio-economic sphere and the ramifications of present day theories (on middlemen as a universal phenomenon in so called 'host societies') with regard to the 'Rise of the Jews'. I use these terms with much caution, though, as they often reflect a certain unthinking bias among researchers.”

Barenboim, Daniel

1/4: Who is this

"Daniel Barenboim was born in Buenos Aires in 1942 to parents of Jewish Russian descent. He started piano lessons at the age of five with his mother, continuing to study with his father who remained his only other teacher. In August 1950, when he was only seven years old, he gave his first official concert in Buenos Aires.

Important influences in his development as a musician included Artur Rubinstein and Adolf Busch, both of whom performed in Argentina. The Barenboim family moved to Israel in 1952. Two years later, in the summer of 1954, the parents brought their son to Salzburg to take part in Igor Markevich's conducting classes. During that same summer he also met Wilhelm Furtwängler, played for him and attended some of the great conductor's rehearsals and a concert. Furtwängler subsequently wrote a letter including the words "the eleven year-old Barenboim is a phenomenon ..." This phrase was to open many doors to Daniel Barenboim for a long time to come. In 1955 the young Daniel Barenboim studied harmony and composition with Nadia Boulanger in Paris.

Barenboim made his debut as a pianist in Vienna and Rome in 1952, in Paris in 1955, in London in 1956 and in New York in 1957 with Leopold Stokowski and the Symphony of the Air. From then on, he made annual concert tours of the United States and Europe. He toured Australia in 1958 and soon became known as one of the most versatile pianists of his generation." "When one continues to uphold the Wagner taboo today in Israel, it means in a certain respect that we are giving Hitler the last word, that we are acknowledging that Wagner was indeed a prophet and predecessor of Nazi anti-Semitism, and that he can be held accountable, even if only indirectly, for the final solution.

This view is unworthy of Jewish listeners, who should rather be influenced by such great Jewish thinkers as Spinoza, Maimonides, and Martin Buber than by half-baked dogmas." (URL: <http://bit.ly/SnhSBO>)

2/4: What is he or she accused of?

No one is accusing him. Rather to the contrary, he may have some sharp words for anyone who doubts that Iran is bent on destroying Israel. Here is not the place to discuss the accuracy of this contentious point. He is here as his general views show an enlightened way akin to the Hebrew humanism of Buber. It is not about denying Israel anything or stigmatizing Israel at any length. It is about making the whole idea of Israel in its neighbourhood a mutually and equally beneficial success for ALL parties at home in the region. He has some very constructive things to say about the way ahead. Good stuff.

“Der heute in Israel vorherrschende politische Entwurf sowohl laizistischer Nationalisten als auch orthodox-jüdischer Fundamentalisten zielt (jedoch) auf die Aufhebung des Zionismus und damit auf die wesentliche Form, die die Moderne dem Judentum gegeben hat. [...]

Der geistige Dialog, der über Jahrzehnte zwischen den Positionen Hermann Cohens, Franz Rosenzweigs, zwischen Leo Strauss und Hannah Arendt, Ernst Bloch, Margarete Susman und Emil Fackenheim geführt wurde, ein Dialog, der schließlich die postmoderne, nordamerikanische Gegenwartsphilosophie wesentlich beeinflusste, hat ergeben, dass die säkularen normativen Begründungen des staatsbildenden Zionismus zu einer Erneuerung des jüdischen Volkes nicht zureichen - ganz unabhängig von der Frage, welche Legitimität eine oft übermäßige Selbstbehauptungspolitik des israelischen Staates gegenüber den Palästinensern angesichts der jüdischen Ethik hat.” No denying this: This is really good humanist and humane stuff. <http://bit.ly/PisLte>

1/4: Who is this

"Martin Buber (1878 – 1965) was a philosopher.

“The philosopher, Martin Buber put it well when he said: "The notion of the Jews as chosen people does not indicate a feeling of superiority, but a sense of destiny. It does not spring from a comparison with others but from the concentrated devotion to a task...to the task of bringing a love of one God to the rest of the world" And Buber continues, "Never boast of being chosen. Instead, live up to it."

“Martin Buber was an advocate of the ideology of Brit Shalom” <http://bit.ly/SXLnKN>
Ben Ehrenreich, [as the name indicates Barbaras´ son] wrote in the Opinion section of the Los Angeles Times: “The Brit Shalom movement -- founded in 1925 and supported at various times by Martin Buber, Hannah Arendt and Gershom Scholem -- argued for a secular, binational state in Palestine in which Jews and Arabs would be accorded equal status. Their concerns were both moral and pragmatic. The establishment of a Jewish state, Buber feared, would mean "premeditated national suicide." URL (16.10.12): <http://lat.ms/5wi2B>

“In 1925, Martin Buber in Germany and Judah Magnes in Palestine established the political organization Brit Shalom to promote Jewish-Arab understanding in Palestine. Brit Shalom, which functioned until 1933, stood on a platform of creating ‘a binational state in which the two peoples will enjoy equal rights as befits the two elements shaping the country's destiny, irrespective of which of the two is numerically superior at any given time’ (from their first publication Our Aspirations, 1927).” Source: Bassem Eid, *Multiculturalism in Israel/Palestine: Can a Binational State be the Solution for the Middle East Conflict ? From 1960 to 1962 Buber served as first president of the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities. Buber died in 1965. Martin Buber is identified as both Austrian and Israeli. This range of identifications represents the shifting borders that occurred throughout his lifetime. In conflict with his Orthodox Jewish heritage, Martin Buber devoted much of his work to secular philosophy. In 1898 he joined the Zionist movement, serving as a delegate to the Third Zionist Congress in 1899. He is best remembered for his examination of dialogue. Between the two wars, Buber became a spokesman for what he called ‘Hebrew Humanism’, advocating a policy of reconciliation with the Arab population of Palestine. In 1923 Buber published his most famous work, I and Thou, in which he outlines a religious philosophy of dialogue. Two years later the first volumes of his and Franz Rosenzweig’s German translation of the Bible appeared. He famously examined the difference between the I-You and I-It relationships. He considered these relationships to constitute the basic words that defined human understanding and relations. Throughout his career, Martin Buber was awarded the Goethe award of the University of Hamburg, the Peace Prize of the German Book Trade, the Israel Prize in the humanities, the Bialik Prize for Jewish, and the Erasmus Prize in Amsterdam. Martin Buber wrote in a poetic style. His texts evoke Hasidic folktales, midrash a rabbinic spiritual exegesis his grandfather Solomon Buber was a master in, and the metaphysical tradition of dialogue.” (The European Graduate School. 4 /4: Et altera pars: What is he/she saying about this issue and about CHOSENNES

As an existentialist thinker, Buber’s main concern in his writings seems to centre on different types of relationships, namely those between people and nature, human beings with each other, and human and spiritual beings.⁶⁷ In his well-known ‘I–Thou’ formula Buber points to the relationship between man and God as the purest of all. According to Buber, man can be an I in its real sense only through the achievement of the I–Thou relationship. Because, for Buber, ‘all real living is meeting’ and that meeting appears in its purest form only between man and the Eternal Thou (God); this is so, due to the nature of him who ‘is the Being that is directly, most nearly, and lastingly, over against us, that may properly only be addressed’.⁶⁸ Moreover, in Buber’s philosophy, the connection between I and Thou is fully realized in the unique relationship between Israel and God, as there is a special bond connecting them. He wrote: The great deed of Israel is not that it taught the one real God, who is the origin and goal of all being, but that it pointed out that this God can be addressed by man in reality, that man can say Thou to Him, that he can stand face to face with Him, that he can have intercourse with Him.⁶⁹

17 According to Buber, even the relationship between man and God is exhausted through addressing and responding. However, as far as the relationship between God and Israel is concerned, those acts of ‘address’ and ‘response’ realize themselves in a covenantal relationship, making Israel the chosen people. So, in respect of the relationship between God and Israel, the acts of addressing and responding turn into those of ‘being chosen’ and ‘choosing’, respectively, in the complete sense of the terms; and this subsequently brings about some mutual obligations.⁷⁰ For Buber, what makes Israel unique is its ability to respond to God and enter a covenantal relationship with him, but the meaning of its election lies in the fact that ‘any offence against the berith [covenant] is “visited upon” it’.⁷¹ Buber, following the mainstream rabbinic interpretations, maintains that Israel’s election by God over other peoples has only one meaning and therefore serves one purpose, namely ‘to set an example of harmony in obedience to God for the others’. This is the ultimate plan of God for humankind. In other words, the purpose of God’s choosing one people among the others is to make a model people having a dialogue and partnership with God. This emphasis on ‘relationship’ as the essence of Judaism is, in fact, what most differentiates Buber’s theology from that of Rosenzweig, for whom ‘existence’ alone is the consummation of Jewishness. So, according to Rosenzweig, one does not become, but rather is born a Jew, as he states: ‘one is Jewish’.⁷³ According to Buber, however, being

Jewish is ultimately about undertaking the role of a model community whose essence lies in a ‘dialogical’, and not an ‘existential’, relationship between the community members themselves, on the one hand, and between the community and God, on the other. In other words, the task of man in general, and of Israel, in particular, is not ‘being’ but ‘becoming’. As an ideal community, the Jewish people also incorporate in themselves the whole of humanity. For Buber it is not mere existence, but rather a dialogue which matters; an aspiration towards an ideal relationship with the Eternal Thou and humanity, as he writes: ‘In genuine Judaism ethics and faith are no separate spheres; its ideal, holiness, is true community with God and true community with human beings, both in one.’⁷⁴ In another passage Buber makes it clear that the ‘spirit’ (or the ideal) that Israel is believed to possess should refer ‘not to ourselves but to the living truth, which is not our possession, but by which we can be possessed, which is not dependent upon us, but we upon it’.⁷⁵ For Buber, unlike Rosenzweig, to be chosen, or one’s realization of being chosen, is not sufficient in itself. What is more important than this is to ‘respond’ to the choosing act of God; this is the achievement that Buber means by the term ‘dialogue’. As pointed out earlier, Buber’s insistence on ‘becoming’ frees Judaism, at least as he understands it, from the danger of believing that the Jewish people, as a concrete entity, form an ideal community in itself. Rosenzweig’s definition of Jewishness in relation to ‘being’, namely as something finished and waiting to be discovered, however, is not immune to the abovementioned risk of confusing the ideal with the real. Again, as far as the issue of suffering is concerned, there remains a considerable difference between the two thinkers. Buber imposes a two-fold meaning on suffering: one refers to the deuteronomic notion of punishment for sins in relation to Israel’s failure in its responsibilities, and the other to the idea of the suffering servant of God, as introduced in the book of Isaiah. So, whereas for Rosenzweig suffering seems to be the pay-off for being one with the Father,⁷⁶ a condition which is already fulfilled, for Buber it is a result of Israel’s voluntary participation in the covenant.⁷⁷ It is not an unexpected result of a fulfilled position but, on the contrary, as unfortunate as it may seem, is the guarantee of the continuity of the task.

Despite all these differences, however, one thing remains certain, namely that all these modern Jewish thinkers emphasized ‘a positive symbiosis between Judaism and elements of modern German culture’ and also advocated a programme towards universal unity as the goal of Jewish chosenness, albeit in different ways and to different degrees. This was done through reason and mission (Geiger and Cohen), or love (Rosenzweig) or dialogue (Buber). “Accordingly, the notion of chosenness provided the Zionist movement with a missionary role. In this way, the universalist and redemptive implications of the traditional doctrine of chosenness, particularly in terms of ‘leading the world’, were employed to a great extent by the Zionists to justify their goal of establishing a Jewish state in Palestine. The new Jewish nationhood established in their ancestral homeland would aspire to the role of a ‘mentor of the Middle East’ (Moses Hess), or represent a ‘moral priesthood whose authority is accepted by all mankind’ (Ahad Ha-Am), or become ‘the shining star of humankind’ (Martin Buber). The traditional notion of chosenness, which originally referred to the Jewish people as a physical collective entity, was transformed in this way into the Jewish nationhood as a political–ethical entity. The theme of ‘leading the world’ was also used by the socialist Jews of the Diaspora. They would attribute a ‘vanguard’ role to the Jews, as ‘a chosen people not of God but of history’, a people ‘preaching a salvation open to all mankind’.¹⁴ However, unlike the Zionists, they would place an emphasis on the Jewish socialist nationality in the Diaspora instead of a Jewish state in the land.” (source of all of the above: Gürkan, Leyla: The Jews as a chosen people - Tradition and Transformation, Routledge, New York, 2009, p. 93)

"Jimmy Carter (James Earl Carter, Jr.), thirty-ninth president of the United States, was born October 1, 1924, in the small farming town of Plains, Georgia".

"He was educated in the Plains public schools, attended Georgia Southwestern College and the Georgia Institute of Technology, and received a B.S. degree from the United States Naval Academy in 1946. In the Navy he became a submariner, serving in both the Atlantic and Pacific fleets and rising to the rank of lieutenant. Chosen by Admiral Hyman Rickover for the nuclear submarine program, he was assigned to Schenectady, N.Y., where he took graduate work at Union College in reactor technology and nuclear physics, and served as senior officer of the pre-commissioning crew of the Seawolf, the second nuclear submarine. [...] When his father died in 1953, he resigned his naval commission and returned with his family to Georgia. He took over the Carter farms, and he and Rosalynn operated Carter's Warehouse in Plains, a general-purpose seed and farm supply company. He quickly became a leader of the community, serving on county boards supervising education, the hospital authority, and the library. In 1962 he won election to the Georgia Senate. He lost his first gubernatorial campaign in 1966, but won the next election, becoming Georgia's 76th governor on January 12, 1971. He was the Democratic National Committee campaign chairman for the 1974 congressional and gubernatorial elections.

He championed human rights throughout the world. On the domestic side, the administration's achievements included a comprehensive energy program conducted by a new Department of Energy; deregulation in energy, transportation, communications, and finance; major educational programs under a new Department of Education; and major environmental protection legislation, including the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act.

[...] In 1982, he became University Distinguished Professor at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia, and founded The Carter Center. 2/4: What is he or she accused of?

"One of the most prominent anti-Zionists today is Prof. Juan Cole from the University of Michigan. Part of being a successful anti-Zionist involves claiming that Jews have no right to the land of Israel. So to be a good anti-Zionist, one needs to deny Jewish history.

To this end, in March Cole published a piece of historical fiction in the Salon online magazine. Titled "Ten reasons why East Jerusalem does not belong to Israel," Cole mixed half-truths with flagrant lies to justify his denial of Jewish history and belittlement of the Jewish rights. Cole wrote, "Jerusalem not only was not being built by the likely then non-existent 'Jewish people' in 1000 BCE, but Jerusalem probably was not even inhabited at that point in history. Jerusalem appears to have been abandoned between 1000 BCE and 900 BCE, the traditional dates for the united kingdom under David and Solomon."

This assertion is so mendacious that it takes your breath away. As anyone who has actually been in Jerusalem can attest, it is all but impossible to be physically present in the oldest areas of the city and not bump into relics dating from between 1000 and 900 BCE.

Cole's allegation is the academic equivalent of Louis Farakhan's claim that white people are devils planted on earth by aliens. As an anti-Zionist anti-Semite, it was just a matter of time until Cole travelled into the fetid swamp of denying the historical record to facilitate his false claim that Jews are not a people and therefore are bereft of rights as a nation to our national homeland. And why shouldn't he cover himself in anti-Semitic muck? So far, the stench has brought him great success. The very fact that I felt compelled to write an essay explaining why anti-Semitism is anti-Semitism and why anti-Zionism is anti-Semitism is depressing proof that anti-Semites have been wildly successful in whitewashing their bigotry." <http://bit.ly/bmQdp8>

4 /4: Et altera pars: What is he/she saying about this issue

"It finally happened. The Jerusalem Post has declared archeology itself anti-Semitic. To tell you the truth, I am frankly worried about some of my colleagues who are committed Zionists having difficulty in dealing with reality in the wake of the severe difficulties facing the Zionist project in historical Palestine. Caroline Glick's inaccurate and angry attack on me in the Jerusalem Post reminded me again of why I am anxious about the Closing of the Zionist Mind. Glick is actually alleging that anyone who practices critical history of the ancient world or the Middle East in general is thereby an anti-Jewish bigot. Glick, from Chicago, was a captain in the Israeli army and a judge advocate-general during the first Intifada or Palestinian uprising against the Israeli occupation of the West Bank, which the Israeli army brutally crushed. She seems to be going off the deep end, having made herself notorious with the sick satirical video 'We Con the World,' which made fun of the civilian aid workers killed by Israeli commandos on May 31 of this year (and which appears to have had some backing from the Israeli government itself). [...] Other strange features of this discourse are the disregard for any evidence that contradicts the set talking points, unwillingness to seriously reconsider positions in the light of such evidence, the repetition of key phrases in an impenetrable way, the allegation that critics said things they never said, and insistence on demonizing the source of the alternative evidence. I got exactly the same treatment in the 1970s from Maronite Christians in Lebanon and in the 1990s from pro-Milosevic Serbs, and recognize the condition. It is Failing Nationalism Syndrome (FNS). Since the government of Israeli prime minister Binyamin Netanyahu is doing its best to run out the clock on a two-state solution, the only two plausible outcomes in Israel/Palestine in the coming decades are long years of dreary Apartheid or a one-state solution. It is not plausible that the Israelis will be allowed to keep the Palestinians stateless and without, ultimately, any real rights, forever. So Zionists (Israel nationalists) are increasingly suffering from Failing Nationalism Syndrome, and it is causing them to flail about saying the strangest things. [...] Zionism is just Israel nationalism. Nationalism is of two sorts. It can be a sane patriotism in which people take pride in their identity and pull together to achieve national projects of self-improvement. Or it can be an aggressive, expansionist, grasping and destructive movement that exalts the in-group over out-groups and disadvantages or damages the latter. The second sense of the word ‘nationalism’ was the more common in the 19th and the early 20th century. So, I am not an anti-Zionist in principle (and it is weird that Glick would accuse me of being one), since Israel nationalism is fine with me as long as it is of the first sort. Any nationalism of the second sort, I roundly denounce, whether adopted by Jews, Arabs, or Melanesians. It is the virulent sort that Closes the Mind. [...] Glick is the one who is out of touch with reality. She cannot bump into a single monument from the period 1000-900 BCE in today’s Jerusalem. The position I hold is what is called the ‘Copenhagen school’ or ‘biblical minimalism,’ and it is a perfectly respectable academic movement. I think all archeologists and historians would hold it if some were not religious believers in the Bible. It is people like Capt. Glick who are politicizing archeology and tampering with science.

There is no evidence for a monotheistic cult in Canaan in the period leading up to 1000 BCE. Monotheistic Judaism appears to have been invented in the Babylonian exile or perhaps a little before, and the fables of a great kingdom of David and Solomon were woven together then. The Assyrians were the gossips of the ancient world and they wrote down everything that happened in their clay tablets, and even talk about minor Arab queens in the Hijaz, and they didn’t know anything about a magnificent kingdom of David and Solomon with palaces. If these figures existed at all, I suspect they just had really, really nice tents, not golden palaces (which by the way have not been found despite what ideologues like Glick assert). Historical Judaism was a reformation of Canaanite religion over a period of time. (Some readers asked me who I thought was carried off to Babylon in the first place, and the answer is simple: Canaanites, perhaps those of a certain religious cult, but very possibly not the sort of monotheist depicted in the Bible). [...]

Anyway, if Israel nationalism depends on the Bible’s stories of David and Solomon being historical, then kiss it goodbye. But note that my point in the Salon article was not that Israelis had no right to be in Israel but rather that they have no right to expel all Palestinians from Jerusalem (Yes, that is what Israelis of Glick’s stripe are doing). Glick’s shouting is designed to cover up an ongoing set of crimes against someone else, by painting herself the victim of, horror, biblical minimalism of an academic sort. [...]

I’m still looking for evidence of anti-Semitic muck in anything I’ve written, as opposed to just practicing history. And, I’m glad she thinks me a success, but let’s face it, I’d have gone much further in conventional life if I hadn’t gotten on the wrong side of strident fanatics such as she. But, I was never interested in a conventional career. I have a sneaking admiration for Hunter S. Thompson that I doubt very many deans share. [...]

The Closing of the Zionist Mind, so evident in Glick’s weird column, is dangerous because a cult-like, black and white mindset is the first prerequisite for a turn to violence and it makes compromise and flexibility impossible. But what the Mideast needs more of is reasoned, humane, complex openness to change, to negotiation, to seeing the Other as human. Glick is foreclosing that process, and in so doing is helping dig the grave of Israel as we know it. Luckily, most Israelis I know are nice people and Glick is not representative, so maybe I’m wrong to see a trend here as opposed to just a supremely annoying and ignorant individual." <http://bit.ly/9DQfdZ>

"As my friend Daniel Septimus pointed out to me the other night, had Rosenfeld dealt with the issue of the history of Israel and the academy or progressive Jewish thought, he would have had to contend with the fact that respected and celebrated Jews in the academy, ranging from Martin Buber to Albert Einstein—yes Einstein—proposed at one time or another the possibility of a bi-national state. Simply put, Judaism was more important to them than Jewish nationalism. While I totally disagree with Buber and Einstein, I would never in my right mind label them anti-Semites. These are not crazy people, nor can one even dare to refer to them as anti-Semites. Though, according to Rosenfeld’s criteria, they could be termed anti-Semites, he never once mentions their names." <http://bit.ly/q58FIj>

“Timeline: Richard Falk's Anti-Semitic Cartoon, Denial, and Non-Apology Apology

- June 29 - Richard Falk, the UN Palestine expert tasked by the Human Rights Council to investigate ‘Israel's violations of the bases and principles of international law,’ posts a cartoon on his blog depicting a bloodthirsty dog wearing a Jewish religious headcovering.
- July 6, 9:22 AM (California time) - UN Watch, a Geneva-based human rights organization, exposed Falk's publication of the cartoon, condemns its incitement to anti-Semitism, and calls on UN rights chief Navi Pillay to speak out.
- July 6, 10:38 AM - Falk responds: ‘It is a complete lie. I know nothing about such a cartoon, and would never publish such a thing, ever.’
- July 6, 10:54 AM - Falk deletes the cartoon. He explains: ‘Maybe I do not understand the cartoon, and if it offends in this way I have removed it from the blog. It may be in bad taste to an extent I had not earlier appreciated, but I certainly didn’t realize that it could be viewed as anti-semitic, and still do not realize.’
- July 6, 1:42 PM - Falk is still unable to see any problem with the cartoon: ‘I did not perceive any racist connotations, and certainly no anti-semitic implications, and since it offends people I have removed it without understanding why.’

- July 6, 3:41 PM - Falk points a finger at UN Watch executive director Hillel Neuer: ‘Neuer consistently defames me, claiming I am a 9/11 conspiracy theorist when I am not, and so forth.’
- July 6, approx. 5:00 pm - Falk issues an Apology for Unintentionally Posting Anti-Semitic Cartoon in Qaddafi Arrest Warrant Blog. ‘With apologies, I realize that the cartoon... had strongly anti-semitic symbolism that I had not detected before it was pointed out to me... My intention has never been to demean in any way Jews as a people despite my strong criticisms of Israeli policies, and some versions of Zionist support... Beyond this, if we are to have a sustainable human future we must also make peace with nature, and treat animals with as much respect as possible... At the same time, I am quite aware that many of the messages were motivated to discredit me due to my views of Israeli policies and behavior.’
- July 6, 7:54 PM - Falk admits to knowingly attacking the US: ‘I did realize that the cartoon was anti-American, but I did not realize that it was also anti-semitic.’
- July 7 - UN Watch called on UN rights chief Navi Pillay to lead efforts to fire Richard Falk. Click here for UN Watch press release.“ URL (22.10.12): <http://bit.ly/nLBX1o>

We do not recognize a state founded on antihumanistic principles and on the ruins of an archaic national and war religion. [...]

Comment: Though one understands what he wanted to say – probably the same thing as Angela Merkel when she tells Netanyahu to stop encroaching on international law and begin promoting the peace process as he risks “world seclusion” – but the way Gaarder said it, is rather difficult to digest as he outright spells out a denial of the right of Israel to exist. Or at least that sounds like what he is saying. His basic point being “we do not recognize the inhumane activities of the state of Israel”, for anyone familiar with his work to impute anti-Semitism to him is just ridiculous. Most certainly, Gaarder would agree, that in the same manner as one cannot reject a whole human for some of his wrong actions one cannot reject the state of Israel for its wrongdoings, but instead the wrongdoings themselves.

1/4: Who is this

Born 1927 (Cf. The official web site of the Nobel Prize). "After military service and captivity by American forces 1944-46, he worked as a farm labourer and miner and studied art in Düsseldorf and Berlin. 1956-59 he made his living as a sculptor, graphic artist and writer in Paris, and subsequently Berlin. In 1955 Grass became a member of the socially critical Gruppe 47 (later described with great warmth in The Meeting at Telgte), his first poetry was published in 1956 and his first play produced in 1957. His major international breakthrough came in 1959 with his allegorical and wide-ranging picaresque novel The Tin Drum (filmed by Schlöndorff), a satirical panorama of German reality during the first half of this century, which, with Cat and Mouse and Dog Years, was to form what is called the Danzig Trilogy.

In the 1960s Grass became active in politics, participating in election campaigns on behalf of the Social Democrat party and Willy Brandt. He dealt with the responsibility of intellectuals in Local Anaesthetic, From the Diary of a Snail and in his "German tragedy" The Plebeians Rehearse the Uprising, and published political speeches and essays in which he advocated a Germany free from fanaticism and totalitarian ideologies. His childhood home, Danzig, and his broad and suggestive fabulations were to reappear in two successful novels criticising civilisation, The Flounder and The Rat, which reflect Grass's commitment to the peace movement and the environmental movement. Vehement debate and criticism were aroused by his mammoth novel Ein weites Feld which is set in the DDR in the years of the collapse of communism and the fall of the Berlin wall. In My Century he presents the history of the past century from a personal point of view, year by year. As a graphic artist, Grass has often been responsible for the covers and illustrations for his own works. Grass was President of the Akademie der Künste in Berlin 1983-86, active within the German Authors' Publishing Company and PEN. He has been awarded a large number of prizes, among them Preis der Gruppe 47 1958, "Le meilleur livre étranger" 1962, the Büchner Prize 1965, the Fontane Prize 1968, Premio Internazionale Mondello 1977, the Alexander-Majakowski Medal, Gdansk 1979, the Antonio Feltrinelli Prize 1982, Großer Literaturpreis der Bayerischen Akademie 1994. “SZ: Wie wird die Diskussion um Grass in Frankreich aufgenommen?

Grosser: Es gibt ein paar kleinere Artikel, die eher auf der Seite von Grass sind und die ganze Emotion in Deutschland nicht verstehen können. Die Kritik an Israel – nicht am Judentum – ist hier alltäglich. Kritiker wie ich gelten da vielleicht mal als Antisemiten.

Wir werden aber nicht angegriffen, weil wir würdige Bürger der Französischen Republik sind. In Deutschland ist das anders, weil es dort heißt, als Deutscher dürfe man Israel nicht angreifen.” (<http://bit.ly/Ix9dnV>) "Ich fände es besser, Deutschland würde sich auf sämtliche Gründe besinnen, aus denen heraus man den Nationalsozialismus ablehnt. Höger, Inge

1/4: Who is this

Born 1950 (abgeordnetenwatch.de). Diplom-Betriebswirtin (Ibid.). Tätigkeit: Mitglied des deutschen Bundestages (Cf. Ibid.). Abgeordnete Bundestag DIE LINKE (Ibid.).

2/4: What is he or she accused of?

Broder quotes Höger and after the quote proves his illiteracy. I could not find the quote, could be that she has taken it down from her web-site. "Die Frage, die man sich stellen muss, ist: Wer profitiert von diesen furchtbaren Verbrechen? Zum einen sind nun zwei der für Israel 'gefährlichsten', weil engagiertesten, bekanntesten und renommiertesten Aktivisten ausgeschaltet. Die Morde an Vittorio und Juliano könnten außerdem ein Mittel sein, um der internationalen Solidaritätsbewegung einen empfindlichen Schlag zu versetzen - gerade angesichts der bevorstehenden zweiten Flotilla und der Tatsache, dass sich internationale Aktivisten noch immer nicht davon abbringen lassen, nach Palästina zu fahren. Durch die Behauptung, Juliano und Vittorio seien durch extremistische Palästinenser umgebracht worden, könnten viele Aktivisten nun davon abhalten werden, weiterhin nach Gaza und in die Westbank zu fahren. Das wäre die schlimmste Konsequenz, die die Morde haben könnten, es würde das Lebenswerk dieser beiden Menschen unterminieren. Und die Palästinenser stünden wieder einmal als gewaltbereite Extremisten in der Weltpresse.'

Das ist lupenreiner Antisemitismus. Nicht weil Frau Höger jeden Beleg für ihre Spekulationen schuldig bleibt, sondern weil sie davon ausgeht, ihre Überlegungen seien an und für sich so überzeugend, dass sie nicht belegt werden müssen. So wie ein Mathematiker sich darauf verlässt, dass zwei mal zwei vier ergibt und ein Zoologe nie auf die Idee käme, einen Löwen mit einem Lamm in denselben Käfig zu sperren, so muss auch ein lupenreiner Antisemit nicht beweisen, dass den Juden alles zuzutrauen ist. Das versteht sich von allein. Dieses eiserne Vorwissen ist das Fundament aller antisemitischen Konstrukte und Koalitionen.

Frau Höger könnte ihre hellseherische Begabung auch dazu nutzen, als Trüffelschwein im Hochgebirge zu arbeiten oder mit einer Wünschelrute nach Wasserquellen in der Wüste zu suchen. Aber damit würde sie sich sogar in ihrer eigenen Partei lächerlich machen. Als lupenreine Antisemitin dagegen muss sie nicht befürchten, sich zu blamieren, wenn sie rhetorisch anfragt, wer 'von diesen furchtbaren Verbrechen' profitiert. Cui bono? Es sind, natürlich, die Juden. Eine Antwort, die sowohl sie wie ihre Klientel optimal befriedigt." <http://bit.ly/hYC5n8>

"The SA government admitted outright they believed that races were distinctly different and had to develop separately along their own cultural and traditional lines. Blacks therefore would be treated as foreign workers/visitors to white SA and would have their own "national" rights in their Bantustans - greatly deprived rural areas. Laws were required for such separation of racial groups. Of course, they pretended that each group would receive same assistance for their development but in fact the White group received all the privileges.

In the Israeli case, it is quite clear that non-Jews do not receive equal rights and treatment as Jews, but the Zionists are embarrassed to admit this. Consequently, they attempt to conceal the fact that Israel is not a democracy for all its citizens, but they have various laws to ensure that Jews receive preferential treatment. It is apartheid by another name. I refer here to the situation in Israel itself where over 40 laws give Jews privileges and rights over non-Jews.

In the Occupied Palestinian Territories, it is quite a different matter where open and strict apartheid laws allow for the segregation and control of the Palestinian people whilst the illegal Jewish settlements receive State protection and privileges. But in both cases - Israel itself and the OPT - a clear system of apartheid-style rule operates." Aljazeera interview (27.9.12). URL (15.10.12): <http://aje.me/UYHsxs>

Columbia University, the Department of Middle East and Asian Languages and Cultures, and I personally, have been the target of this intensified campaign for over three years. Pro-Israel groups are pressuring the university to abandon proper academic procedure in evaluating scholarship, and want to force the university to silence all critical opinions. The major strategy that these pro-Israel groups use is one that equates criticism of Israel with anti-Semitism. But the claim that criticism of Israel is an expression of anti-Semitism presupposes that Israeli actions are “Jewish” actions and that all Jews, whether Israelis or non-Israelis (and the majority of world Jews are not Israelis), are responsible for all Israeli actions and that they all have the same opinion of Israel. But this is utter anti-Semitic nonsense. Jews, whether in America, Europe, Israel, Russia, or Argentina, are, like all other groups, not uniform in their political or social opinions." <http://bit.ly/PGd4mC>

“Mahatma Gandhi was an anti-Semite. [...] In an article in the November 26, 1938 issue of a magazine called Harijan, Gandhi suggested that Germany’s Jews could successfully confront their Nazi oppressors with non-violence. Well, this was 1938. World War II had not yet begun. If we wish to excuse Gandhi on the grounds that he didn’t know what he was talking about, since he was writing before Hitler’s plans were known, we should also consider that he told Louis Fischer, one of his biographers, after the war was over, that “collective suicide” might have been a better strategy: “The Jews died anyway, didn’t they? They might as well have died significantly” (see “The Gandhi Nobody Knows” by Richard Grenier, Commentary, March 1983). Collective suicide is not satyagraha, since it is in no way passive. And how passive can one be about one’s children when committing collective suicide? Gandhi never advocated collective suicide in any other situation.” (Jochowitz, George; In: Jochowitz George Homepage (2009): “The Universality of Anti-Semitism”. "Another example of this is a question posed by Norman Paech, then professor of public law at the University for Science and Politics in Hamburg and current Foreign Policy Spokesman of the Left's party grouping in the Bundestag, to German-Jewish Professor Micha Brumlik. In an open letter responding to Brumlik's criticism of the Canadian philosopher Ted Honderich for legitimizing terrorism, Paech asked him whether it has 'occurred to you that such an executive's ensure of thought could give a fresh boost to anti-Semitism, which, after all, clearly exists in our society?'[48] On another occasion, Paech claimed that Israel was waging a 'war of extermination'[49] in Lebanon, thereby using a specific term in characterizing the actions of the Jewish State that is clearly associated with the kind of battle conducted by the Nazis in Eastern Europe.[50] His use of the ideologue of the (co-)responsibility of Jews for anti-Semitism, as well as the double standards in the treatment of Israel, by no means epitomize a slip of the pen. Both constitute positions that Paech had already been promoting decades earlier. At the time he had written in the Hamburger Lehrerzeitung that 'Israel has, however, to ask itself indeed whether its Palestine policy does not fuel a latent anti-Semitism in Germany, which we cannot counter by remaining silent.'[51]" <http://bit.ly/VtpHbx>

4 /4: Et altera pars: What is he/she saying about this issue

Edward Said spoke quite favorably of the politics of Martin Buber and the Brit Shalom movement he helped found: “During the inter-war period a small but important group of Jewish thinkers (Judah Magnes, Buber, Arendt and others) argued and agitated for a binational state. The logic of Zionism naturally overwhelmed their efforts, but the idea is alive today here and there among Jewish and Arab individuals frustrated with the evident insufficiencies and depredations of the present. The essence of that vision is coexistence and sharing in ways that require an innovative, daring and theoretical willingness to get beyond the arid stalemate of assertion and rejection. Once the initial acknowledgment of the other as an equal is made, I believe the way forward becomes not only possible but attractive.”

Sand, Shlomo

"Shlomo Sand studied history at the University of Tel Aviv and at the École des hautes études en sciences sociales, in Paris. He currently teaches contemporary history at the University of Tel Aviv." (Verso Books)

2/4: What is he or she accused of?

"Among the most open Israeli promoters of anti-Semitic mythology today is Professor Shlomo Sand, a hardcore communist on the history faculty of Tel Aviv University. Sand last year published a book with a far-left anti-Israel publisher claiming to prove that Jews are not and never have been a 'people.' Recycling myths popularized by Neo-Nazi web sites, Sand's entire book is a sort of Protocols of the Elders of Anti-Zion, a pseudo-analysis that claims that most Jews today are frauds, converts from the Khazar Turkic tribe, impersonators of Jews. All real Jews, according to the learned professor, became Palestinian Arabs centuries ago. Hence Israeli 'Jews' are not Jews at all, certainly none that have a right to their own state." <http://bit.ly/S4WBhW>

Tikkun Olam - NOT A PERSON BUT A CONCEPT rooted in metaphysical deep culture

“The Jewish response to injustice – to actively pursue tikkun olam – is deeply rooted in our religious and cultural heritage, going to the core of the Jewish faith.” This concept is also central to Israel’s official foreign aid policy towards the “developing” world. Look up Rabbi Michael Lerner’s work to find out more about this concept. Really good Hebrew Humanism.
